Our pupils have worked most faithfully, and made marked progress in all their studies; and not this only, but we see so marked a change in the character and general appearance of some as to fill us with deep joy. We feel assured that some have met with a change of heart, and are not without hope for others who are less open in the expression of their feelings. A week ago yesterday, with only one days notice to people or pupils, we had a public examination in the church. It was in reality nothing but a brief review of oar lessons, in the usual manner of conducting them, interspersed with singing. The house was crowded, and our girls did far better than we dared hope for, considering the old time customs that are so firm in influence here. With heads uncovered they recited, in an open, full voice, not only in the presence of their parents-in-law (to be), but even in some eases before the young men to whom they are engaged, --a victory that is a victory, when won for the first time in this country. The members of the several medj lises, and parents of our pupils remained to take us by the hand and thank us for our efforts; and we in our deep joy, forgot that it had been effort. PLEA FOR CONTINUANCE. My chief object now in writing is to plead for continued effort here. It has been...
