The President of the United States, in compliance with a recommendation of Congress, had previously dispatched an investigating commission to the Texan border, to inquire in to the robberies complained of in Texas, and alleged to have been perpetrated by Indians and citizens of Mexico. That was the origin of the appointment in the neighboring country of a similar commission. The Mexican Government wanted to have the matter investigated on its side, and as impartially as possible, for it felt the necessity of being prepared against the plots of some malicious claimants and other ambitious private parties in this country. The result of the Mexican investigation is shown in these reports, now published in English for the information of the American people. It proves...
